- Fritz, Fremont F., Mayor of the City of Towner, Trustee State Reform School, Mandan, N. D., Real Estate and Loans, Towner. 1885. Mayor Fritz is serving his second term as Mayor of the city of Towner, N. D., having been elected by an overwhelming majority at the election in 1909. He gives practically his entire time to the city's welfare. Under his administration Towner has advanced in its municipal improvements ahead of many cities of much larger population. The city boasts of a fine city hall, has improved fire apparatus and a fire department of fifty-six members. It also has one of the best water works systems in the northwest, and in addition the city last year constructed a system of cement walks that compares favorably with any city in the state. A Board of Park Commissioners has been created and a splendid park system is being established. Mayor Fritz, although a democrat in politics, and belonging to the minority party in McHenry county, as a candidate for Representative at a recent state election, demonstrated his exceeding popularity by receiving within a few votes of the necessary number to elect him. He has been a member of the Board of Trustees of the North Dakota Reform School at Mandan for several years, and in 1909 was appointed president of the board. He is a
- firm believer in his adopted state, and never loses an opportunity to boost for Towner, the gateway city to the famous Mouse River Valley. Mr. Fritz was born at Belleville, Dane county, Wisconsin, August 24, 1861, but at an early age was left an orphan by the death of his father during the civil war. With the exception of a partial pension from the government until he reached his sixteenth year, he was left to shift for himself. In 1879 he went to Northfield, Minnesota, where he attended college for several years. In 1883 he came to North Dakota, taking up railroad telegraphy, which he followed for some time, finally locating in the Mouse River Valley in 1885. He was engaged in the lumber and hardware business in the city of Towner for several years, and later took up real estate and farming. In 1894 he published a book for general distribution, setting forth the great opportunities to be found in the Mouse River Valley. He has always been an ardent advocate of the wonderful resources of this valley and McHenry county, and is a firm believer in the future of this country, which he has seen develop from a wild and unsettled region into prosperous communities, dotted with cities and villages, and crossed in every direction with railroads.

- Inkster, George T., deceased, was born at Fort Selkirk, Manitoba, in 1848, was of Scotch parentage, and grew to manhood on the frontier. Early in life he attended college at Winnipeg, Manitoba, obtaining a fine education. He assisted in surveying the International Boundary Line and placing of the large iron mounds, locating each mile along the line marking the boundary. Later he was employed by the Hudson Bay Fur Company as manager and trader of a number of their stores in the northwest. He continued in the service of this company until 1875, when the company ceased operations in the United States. In 1875 he was married to Miss Caroline Cherchote, of Pembina, Dakota Territory. That year he settled on the Red Lake River, about six miles from the city of Grand Forks, N. D., on the Minnesota side, where he remained nearly two years. The country in this locality settling up rapidly he sold his farm at this place and took up his abode on Big Salt River, in Grand Forks County, North Dakota. He was one of the first settlers in that part of the county. Mr. Inkster followed farming and ranching for a number of years on Big Salt River, and when the settlers were getting too numerous for him, he and W. R. Pitts, and a small party of men came west to the Mouse River country in the spring of 1882. He located on a stock ranch about eight miles southwest of the present city of Towner, on the west bank of Mouse River, bringing his family, consisting of his wife and four children, here the next year. This country was greatly to his liking as he was a great lover of hunting, there being large game in abundance here as well as on the Big Salt River in the early days. Geese and ducks swarmed here, in season, by the millions, and it was not an uncommon occurrence to see the flat lands along the Mouse River covered with geese and ducks as far as the eye could see. The present city of Inkster, in Grand Forks County, North Dakota, is named for him. George T. Inkster became one of the early county officials of McHenry county, North Dakota, being elected Registrar of Deeds in 1886, holding this office for six years. In the year 1897, when the Klondyke gold fever was at its height, Mr. Inkster was seized with a longing for the excitement of life on the frontier again, and joined the throngs that visited Alaska in search of gold and adventures. Shortly after his departure for the gold fields his wife died, and he at once returned home, having been in Alaska but a short time. In the fall of 1901 Mr. Inkster was taken ill, and was removed to the hospital at Grand Forks, North Dakota, where he died December 31, 1901, leaving four daughters and two sons. He also left one brother, who has been sheriff at Winnipeg, Manitoba, for many years.

- Pitts, William R., retired, Towner. Mr. Pitts was born in Reedsburg, Sauk county, Wisconsin, October 9, 1851. His father, William Pitts, was born in Saratoga county, New York, May 8, 1815, and his mother, whose maiden name was Annie Fisher, was born in Tompkins county, New York, December 25, 1819. His parents emigrated from New York State to Wisconsin, in the early forties. In the family were six brothers and two sisters. Mr. Pitts, the subject of this sketch, received a common school education in his home town during the pioneer days of Wisconsin. In the spring of 1862, when the country was in the throes of a civil war, the elder Mr. Pitts and two sons enlisted in the cause of the Union. The two sons were killed in battle, and the father returned home in 1864. Previous to this the family had emigrated to Henderson, Sibley county, Minnesota, but owing to the uprising of the Sioux Indians, and the hostilities toward the white settlers in that part of the country at that time the family returned to Tomah, Monroe county, Wisconsin, in August, 1862. Wm. R. Pitts resided there until 1871, following the vocation of farming. In 1871 he emigrated to Barron county, Wisconsin, where he served as interpreter for Indian Commissioner C. A. Hunt, and while acting as interpreter, Mr. Pitts assisted in the removal of the Winnebago Indians from Wisconsin to the Crow Creek Agency, Dakota Territory, experiencing many exciting events during the transfer of these Indians. Upon his return to Barron county, Wisconsin, Mr. Pitts settled down to farming and stock raising. October 31, 1873, he was married to Marrison Blyton, a sister of W. H. Blyton of Sparta, Wisconsin, secretary to Clarence A. Hunt, Government Indian Commissioner, who had the contract of removing the Winnebagoes to the Crow Creek Agency. In 1877, Mr. Pitts, with his wife and one child, started overland by team to the new frontier in Dakota Territory, locating on the Big Salt River, about fifty-five miles northwest of the present city of Grand Forks, North Dakota, and settling upon unsurveyed land. During his residence at this point in Grand Forks county, there was only one other settler living farther west of him on the Big Salt River at that time. That settler was George T. Inkster, for whom the present city of Inkster was named. In Grand Forks county, Mr. Inkster was an early pioneer, and prior to settling on the Big Salt River, had been employed by the Hudson Bay Fur Company. Mr. Pitts and Mr. Inkster soon became fast friends, and, as both were great lovers of hunting, some of their trips in those early days were fraught with much excitement and adventure; elk, antelope and deer being plentiful, roaming over the country in large herds. Mr. Pitts resided in Grand Forks county until 1882, when he, in company with George Inkster and a small party of friends made a prospecting trip to the Mouse River Valley, Dakota Territory. Mr. Pitts, being a keen observer, quickly noted the great fertility of the soil in this valley and the abundance of the native grasses for the ranging of stock, decided at once to locate, and settled north of Wintering River. This was four years prior to the advent of the railroad into the Mouse River Valley. Mr. Pitts, aside from his general farming, was an extensive stock-raiser, making a specialty of raising cattle and horses for a number of years. In 1886 he was elected sheriff of McHenry county, serving twelve years. He was an efficient public officer, and through his efforts many criminals were brought to justice during the early territorial days on the Mouse River. He is at present making his home in the city of Towner, the county seat.
